BAPTIST REVIVAL
CLOSES LAST NIGHTRev. S. P. Martin Preaches at Last
Service of Big Evangelistic
Campaign

That a man may be saved anywhere and that the purpose of his salvation is that he may glorify God, was the central theme of the sermon preached by Rev. Sam P. Martin at the First Baptist church last night. The revival campaign came to a close with this service.

The pastor commented upon instances where men were saved in unusual places. The case of Saul who was saved on his journey to Damascus and that of Zaccheus who had climbed a tree were commented upon.

Two girls were converted at the service and joined the church last night. A large crowd was present in spite of the inclemency of the weather. After the close of the regular service a "Soul Winner's Band" was formed by about fifty members. Rev. Powell was elected as leader.

ADDRESS FORMER
SOLDIERS TONIGHTDr. Trigg Thomas Asks Every Ex-Ser-man to Attend—Plans for Busy Week

The First Presbyterian church was crowded last night, in spite of a pouring rain, to hear one of Dr. Trigg Thomas' famous sermons and in fact it was a great day all the way through from the opening of Sunday school, when he organized the children for effective work, and afterwards the morning service, when he preached a powerful sermon, on "The Only Foundation." Saturday night he preached a sermon calculated to reach the children a great many of whom were present.

Tonight the evangelist will give a lecture-sermon on "Life Among the Soldiers in the Argonne Forest." Dr. Thomas was chaplain with the famous 51st division, and was with the boys abroad when the mightiest battles were fought and won. He has asked every ex-soldier in Middlesboro to be present.

Wednesday night will be high school night, and the students will be asked to sit in a group in the body of the church, while the glee clubs will be in the choir loft and lead the music. Dr. Thomas wants it to be understood that he is not trying to interfere with any other meeting that may be slated for Wednesday night, but owing to Thursday being Epiphany night, and a short service only being scheduled this was the best other night of the week.

Dr. Thomas spoke at high school assembly this morning, then at the opening of circuit court of District 5. He is planning for a very busy week.

CHIEF BALL SAYS LIQUOR CAUSES ALL LAWLESSNESS

The number of arrests in Middlesboro has decreased from 150 per month to 65, according to Chief H. B. Ball in a brief speech on the subject of temperance before the mens Bible class at the M. E. Church (South) Sunday morning. All of the violations of laws are caused by liquor, he stated.

With the proper cooperation of the officers of Claiborne and Lee counties the liquor traffic could be entirely stopped, he said, as the liquor supply of Middlesboro comes from these counties.

EVANGELIST OPENS
CIRCUIT COURT HERETo Be Present Each Morning of Session—Judge Forrester
Praises Thomas

Civil court convened in the circuit court room at 9 o'clock this morning with an opening prayer by Rev. Trigg A. Thomas. The evangelist invoked divine guidance in the administration of justice.

After the opening prayer he made a snappy thirty-minute talk to the large crowd assembled in the court room. He stressed the fact that there are a number of things in the Bible that cannot be understood and said that time spent in arguments over such subjects is wasted. It is none of our business he said where Cain got his wife or why Eve was made from the rib of Adam. The service was closed by a brief prayer by Dr. J. A. Gray.

The evangelist promised to be present at the opening of court tomorrow morning and speak on the subject of the "Virgin Birth and the Immortality of the Soul."

Judge J. G. Forrester stated that Rev. Thomas' speech before the court at Pineville had done more good than his application of the law.

TO SHOW WALLACE
REID PICTURES HERE
TILL CONTRACTS OUT

That pictures of Wallace Reid will continue to be shown here until present contracts have expired is the opinion of Otto Brown, manager of the Manning theater. It is not thought that the recent death of the screen star will render his films unpopular. Some of his best productions are yet to be shown here.

"Of course in some cases where a screen actor dies the films are taken off the market and contracts with exhibitors canceled, but I am of the opinion that the Wallace Reid pictures will continue on the market," he said.

There have been such a few deaths among the most famous stars that the attitude of the producers, the exhibitors and the public in regard to a continuance of such pictures has not been determined. Several years ago John Bunny, the comedian, died and his pictures were taken off the market. The films of Olive Thomas who was not such a universal favorite continued after her death.

While some patrons have expressed their unwillingness to see any more of Reid's pictures, others have said that the death of the actor, in their opinion, had no effect on their attitude toward his pictures. Others stem even more anxious to see him on the screen since his death. It is said that his films will be considered priceless in later years.

None of his favorites seem to have turned against him since his unfortunate illness. The fact that his death was caused by a voluntary giving up of the dope habit has endeared him to the hearts of many patrons.

POSTMASTER URGES ACTION ON WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

Owners of 1918 War Savings stamps should either exchange them for Treasury Certificates or get the money on them, according to postmaster Chas. E. Cooke. As they matured on January 1, they do not draw any interest.

There are a large number of holders of these stamps who have not redeemed them and the money thus invested is lying idle. Mr. Cooke says that the postoffice is now in a position to redeem all of them with cash. A safe and attractive investment in the form of Treasury Certificates is open to those who do not need the money.

BIG TONNAGE FOR CONNECTING ROADEngineers Working On Projected
Southern-Clover Fork
Branch

PINEVILLE, Jan. 22.—Approximately 2,000,000 tons of coal regarded as near maximum capacity of the Clover Fork coal field, have already been signed up for the projected new railroad to connect the head of the Clover Fork field, served at present only by the L. and N. railroad with the Southern in Virginia, according to reliable reports here. W. B. Landrum, coal operator and broker, of Harlan, here Sunday, said that better than 85 per cent of the tonnage was signed.

Following this news came word that a preliminary survey for a proposed route already was under way, engineers working on Track Branch which would require only a 3200 foot tunnel. This work is being done under authorization of Baltimore capitalists.

Terms of the agreement between operators and promoters of the new road are said to be a guarantee of a definite tonnage at 5 cents per ton for a minimum number of years, unless a definite sum is paid before the expiration of the maximum term.

At least some of the operators in this field posted on conditions on Clover Fork, have doubts of the final construction of the projected road.

COAL OPERATIONS
AT LOW STAGESouthern Appalachian Men Hampered
By Lack Of Cars, But Demand Fair

KNOXVILLE, Jan. 22.—Coal operation in the Southern Appalachian section are very quiet at the present time, owing to lack of cars, according to R. B. Howe secretary of the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' association. In many places the mines are not running half time. While the market for domestic coal is fairly good and the prices fair, there has been a considerable falling off in the demand for nut and steam coal.

Lack of cars, however, is not always the primary fault. Mr. Howe stated. There are times when the mines are supplied with a generous lot of cars, but engine facilities of the roads are not adequate for the moving of the cars. This has been the experience of some of the operators of the Southern Appalachian territory lately.

There is a deficiency in the general transportation facilities of the railroads penetrating the southern coal sections, and this in a measure is responsible for a part of the idleness of the mines. In the opinion of Mr. Howe this condition will prevail until some mode of financing the acquisition of new equipment by the railroads is arrived at.

A THOUGHT

This is the victory that over-comes the world, even our faith.—1 John 5:4.

The two sentiments which most inspired men to good deeds are love and hope. Religion should give these and more rational play to these two sentiments than the world has hitherto witnessed; and the love and hope will be thoroughly grounded in and on efficient, serviceable, visible, actual and concrete deeds of conduct.—Charles W. Eliot.

PAY UP YOUR BILLS

Not the least important in this national thrift campaign is "Pay up your bills" days. If we would look our friends the merchants, squarely in the eye without a lurking feeling of guilt, if we would have our honestly earned money before the world, we should lose no time in paying our old debts. By doing this we will strengthen our personal credit, help the merchants to pay their debts and aid the city in general by putting idle money into circulation.

Credit is an essential thing in American business life. Commercial relations from those of the smallest grocery store in Middlesboro to the strongest national bank of New York are based upon credit. It is a great vital force that keeps moving the business of a nation, but, its basic elements are merely faith in human nature.

Most people are honest. A careful commercial statistics prove this. But and more pronounced with the passing of time. An occasional statement bearing the inevitable "Please remit" serve as a prod to the dormant memory but even these begin to lose their efficiency. At last comes a stage when we feel that paying the bill would be almost like giving away that much money.

The procedure is an unpleasant one, both for the creditor and the debtor and it is not used by merchants except as a last resort. Almost invariably it has the effect of erecting a barrier between the merchant and erstwhile patron.

Procrastination, the proverbial thief of time, is also the enemy of amicable credit relations.

Let's begin today to square ourselves on the books of the merchants of Middlesboro.

ALL EUROPE IMPERILED

The situation in the Ruhr grows more serious each day. The invasion by the French, which had full provocation in the attitude of the German Government and of German capitalists toward reparations, but which did not receive the approval of others of the allies, nevertheless has brought a crisis that threatens the peace of Europe. For this the responsibility will be variously located and Germany cannot escape a large share of the blame.

As the loser of the war the laws of war required that Germany submit herself to the penalties imposed by the victors. This she never has shown a disposition to do. All kinds of "hocus pocus" have been resorted to by the Government of Germany and by those of influence there to sidestep the obligations imposed.

France and Belgium, as the worse sufferers of her depredations, naturally have been most aggravated by the delinquencies of Germany in the matter of reparations. Of 45,000,000, 000 francs spent on restoration Germany has contributed less than 5,000,000,000, and in other ways given provocation for the taking of the step which, under the Versailles treaty and the reparations award, was authorized in the event of default.

If all reports are to be credited it is not a question of Germany's ability but of her willingness. Unless cables li viciously, enough money has gone out of Germany under the noses of her Government officials and of her taxgatherers to have and met all reparations payments to date. There will not be much sympathy for Germany from those who believe this.

There is, however, a grave doubt of the wisdom of France's action at this time. International diplomats and internal financiers were working on a scheme to relieve the European situation—a scheme which might have made invasion of Germany unnecessary could Germany have been pledged and her pledges guaranteed. That this could be accomplished the French doubted having had sufficient reasons in recent years to distrust all of Germany's promises. Hence the failure of the allies to come to such an agreement as would prevent France moving to enforce the decree of Versailles.

Now the die is cast. Great Britain is a passive bystander and may be drawn into the caldron at any moment. Minor clashes have taken place. Major ones are threatened by the armed resistance of Germany. France has taken a desperate step and is prepared to take vigorous and tragic action to maintain her position. The embroilment of all Europe is imminent.

Now seems to be the time, if the Dove of Peace is housed in Washington, as many think, to liberate it—Winchester, un.

Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton

One day Mr. Stamp, the fairy post-man, said to the twins, "What did I tell you?"

And he held up a letter with a big red heart on it instead of a postage stamp.

"A valentine!" exclaimed Nancy. "I just saw little Cottontail skipping around that bush over yonder, so I wouldn't be surprised if he dropped it in the box when I wasn't looking," said Mr. Stamp.

"Who's it to?" asked Nick. "Why it's addressed to Fleet Fox," said Nancy, looking at the envelope through her magical glasses.

"Then I'll bet you it hasn't any love in it!" declared Mr. Stamp positively. "I'll bet you it's a comical valentine. And won't it be mad thought if he finds out who sent it, Mr. Cutie?"

Nick put the letter in the valentine box, and then they all went on with their work. There was a great deal to do in the hickory tree these busy days and they had no time to waste on gossip.

Bye'n' bye Fleet Fox came along—stopped. "Well I declare," he grumbled, "there isn't a letter for me! Will you please hand it out, Miss Nancy?"

Suddenly he cried out, Oh, oh, oh! Just wait until I catch that fellow! Just you wait!" And he threw down his valentine and rushed away in a rage.

"Let's read it," said Nick, picking up the paper. "Oh, no wonder he got mad! Just listen!" This was the valentine—

"I love your voice—when I don't hear it, I love your smile—when I'm not near it, I love your way—when I'm not in it. Now guess who wrote this—think a minute."

"Cutie had better hide himself well!" laughed the little fairy post-man.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

KATE WARD, widow of DAN WARD, living with her father JESSE PARSONS, has a visitor, CHENATOWN ALICE, who says Dan was father of her child.

DOROTHEA, Kate naturally is deeply perturbed. Then, in the stillness of the night, a "voice" whispers to her of a mysterious man, could she find it, would prove to contain the story of Dan's past. A few evenings later, near their home, Kate and her father find an unconscious man, victim of an auto crash. They carry him in. He recovers, gives his name as JAMES LATHAM, and tells Kate he loves her. Kate, torn between her old affection for Dan and yet fond of Latham does not know what to do.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

In the cool of the early morning Kate sought the wooded spot on the level stretch back of the cottage. She felt that she could think more calmly more surely in the quiet of the woods. She heard footsteps, however, as she followed the path winding between the trees and shortly came face to face with James Latham.

"What—you, too?" he laughed. "Yes, I couldn't sleep and I did want to think—and now you're here."

"Which is as good as telling me to get out of your woods!" He laughed and then continued, "But I'm not going to do! I'm going to stay here just long enough to tell you once more something I told you last night."

"Lady Fair, I love you!" "And," Latham was suddenly serious, "you can't accuse me of being insincere, because no man would test his courage enough to say those three words in the light of early morning, unless he meant them. It's easy enough to make love in the moonlight—lady fair, sometimes hard not to whether you mean it or not. But when a man tells you, before breakfast in the morning, that he loves you—he means it!"

"Jimmy-lad, I might believe you once in a while if you didn't joke so much," Kate tried to meet his mood, but her voice was lugubrious.

"You'd have to believe me—I intend to keep saying it over and over until you do," softly. I mean it, Lady Fair."

"You mean it? You really mean that you do care and you would do something for me, even if it cost you an effort?" she asked.

"I would dear," earnestly. "Then Jimmy—you say you know Dan?" hesitantly.

"Yes, dear."

"And I've told you about Alice and—about Dorothy. Find out for me if it's true! I must know whether I can believe in him or whether I can't. If—if I should find that I couldn't—"

Kate's voice was low and steady, finally ceased.

"If you couldn't dear?" James Latham had taken her hand.

"If I should find that I couldn't believe in him as I did, I think it would harden my spirit so that no one would love me!"

"And there's something I must tell you, Jimmy!" she went on. "You'll think I'm wild, but you must know it."

And Kate told James Latham about the voice which she heard, told him what she thought she had heard the voice say.

When she finished speaking James Latham looked up.

"Kate," he said "I know where that trunk is."

FORDSON DAY IS WEDNESDAY

Fordson Day is being planned for your entertainment. We want to meet everyone of you at the entrance of the MANRING THEATRE, WEDNESDAY MORNING and WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON. January is a good visiting month in the year; a time when you farmers can leave the farm for a day or two. And Wednesday will be a day profitably spent in Middlesboro. You will carry some new ideas back to the farm with you.

The Weather Report Says:

*Fordson Day
weather, Fair and Sunshine*

The weather man approves Fordson Day and has written down Fair and Sunshine for Wednesday. So you just plan to come along. Bring all the family.

Everything Free

This day is on us. Everything is free to you, including the 8 reels of pictures at the Manring Theatre from 1.30 o'clock to 3:30 Wednesday afternoon. In the morning two expert mechanics direct from the Ford factory will speak to you on farm problems. You are invited to ask any farm question.

TODAY IS PAY-YOUR-BILLS-DAY

Pay Your Bills

Keep Your Good Standing in the Community

"That man pays his bills promptly. Good man, give him all the credit he asks."

THAT is the best recommendation you can hope to get from any business concern. It is one you should make an effort to earn for yourself.

If you would attain success in the business world begin now by getting a good credit standing. Poor credit not only hurts you, but reflects on the other members of your family.

And it is not only unfair to you, but to the merchants you owe when you put off paying a debt. To operate a good business the merchants must collect the bills you and others owe them.

Pay your bills today and celebrate Thrift Week.
